Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

This house is the single survivor of a row of two-story, two-bay wide late Italianate-style brick houses with shed roofs and scroll-sawn bracketed cornices that were built along the south side of the 1100 block of Sarah Anne St. c. 1888. The house retains its original brick facades, which was painted.

The houses is two stories in height, two rooms deep and there is no backbuilding. The kitchen is located in the basement. The house is constructed in running bond and was originally painted. It has a single hooded chimney located at the rear corner of the house. The shed roof is capped by a wooden cornice consisting of a crown molding supported by three long scroll-sawn brackets decorated with grooves, that connect to a lower molding strip decorated with a row of quarter-rounds, and end with a distinct trefoil pattern. The frieze panel, which also serves as ventilation for the attic, is decorated with a row of cross shapes, created with a jig saw.

The tall, narrow window and door openings have flat wood lintels and sills. The windows are filled with 1/1 replacement sash. The single-light doorway transom has been covered over and the house has a modern six-panel door. The house sits on a high basement, lit by a double-hung sash. There is an entrance to the basement from the front of the house, a few steps down from street level. The front door is reached by five concrete steps.

Builder/Architect

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

This group of houses is significant in that it represents the level of architectural stylishness achieved by many builders of small street houses in the years after the Civil War when these same builders were erecting large, fashionable houses on the main streets, often facing parks or squares. While building three-story houses on the main streets that might sell for $2,500 - $3,500, they were also providing decent, inexpensive housing for the local working classes that might sell for $700 - $900. The houses were built according to a pattern that was quite common to all of the city's neighborhoods of the period c. 1870 to 1910. Recognizing that people held different levels of jobs (and pay), builders created a hierarchy of house sizes (and prices) in the new middle-class neighborhoods going up in west and east Baltimore. Builders acquired anywhere from an eighth to a half of a city block and built 15' to 18'-wide three-story houses on the main streets (priced at different levels according to the importance of the street and the house width), and smaller, 11' to 13'-wide two-story houses on the narrower streets bisecting the blocks.

Builders usually sold their small street houses to German-American semi-skilled workers and laborers who received mortgages from the wide variety of community and ethnically-sponsored building and loan associations. Occasionally, the builder retained ownership of his small street houses to provide income for himself as rental properties or sold them to other investors. In this way people of varying means could afford to live in the same block. If they couldn't afford the approximately $750 purchase price of the small street houses, then they could afford the $8 or so a month it would cost to rent one, while they saved to be able to buy their own home later.
